

Vaccinate

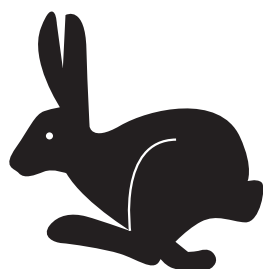

to avoid intense suffering and death

- One Injection
- Once a year
- One life protected
- Simple!

Rabbits need vaccinations (Just like cats and dogs do) to protect them against serious, potentially deadly diseases. Both indoor and outdoor rabbits need to be vaccinated.

Myxomatosis and Viral Haemorrhagic Disease (VHD) cause intense suffering to rabbits. Myxomatosis is spread by biting insects and is highly contagious. VHD is a virus spread in many ways including being airborne, it is also highly contagious and is fatal in 50-100% of rabbits. It can remain active on surfaces for up to 18 months.

These viral diseases are almost always fatal, but can be prevented through vaccination. If you suspect any signs of illness in your rabbit you should consult a vet immediately.

ACTION for Rabbits

It's time to make things happen!

www.actionforrabbits.co.uk info@actionforrabbits.co.uk